Every pre-owned luxury watch should verify its serial numbers against The Watch Register database before every transaction for optimal protection against counterfeit and stolen items. This applies to watches sold with their original box and paperwork, as well as those that have been previously checked by a previous owner. All unique numbers on the watch must be submitted to guarantee an accurate result. The Certificate issued for a watch is only valid for the provided serial number(s). Up to three unique serial identifiers can be entered for each watch, including the case and movement number. These numbers should be entered separately in their respective fields, without prefixes like "No." or "Movement". Edition numbers are entered into the designated edition field, not the serial identifier field. For Patek Philippe watches, both the case and movement numbers must be provided to obtain a Certificate. For further guidance on protecting yourself when purchasing a pre-owned watch, refer to our guidelines. The Watch Register offers various options for checking luxury watches, including searches costing £10 (including VAT) or 1 search credit, with traders able to purchase credits in bundles. Antique and jewelry pieces can be checked using the Art Loss Register site's form. If you're looking to register a lost or stolen watch, please use the dedicated registration page. Please note that before registering your watch, you must create an account or sign in.
